Attached is a document that the students sent me last year, which sets out their reading of what the new Koch agreement addresses and what it doesn't. It takes a moment or two to figure out their code: the color code section identifies several different issues, and the text at the bottom is their summary of the changes that were made in the second agreement. Start with the text at bottom: that's what was addressed in the new agreement (in their reading). Then look at the top, color-coded section: the red text is what they think did not get addressed. Those are the issues they (the students) are pushing on.

I haven't had a moment to eyeball this doc in detail with both agreements in front of me. But I'll do that and get back to all.

We have been asked to provide our opinion on the second agreement to indicate whether we feel that the changes made addressed the concerns and recommendations in the report.
Both have been attachments in recent emails, but I will resend if requested. I suggest that we start with an email discussion and meet before the senate meeting next week to either provide a statement or not.

Eric and Jayne: Since you chaired the review committee can you start the discussion?
